U. S. Plans Nuclear Tests Review

HELP! THAT HEART RENDING cry was heard again last week when a school bus sank to the bottom of a Kentucky river with 27 children. It was heard during the flood of 1955 when hundreds of our friends and neighbors were swept out of their homes; and it was heard again after the recent snowstorm which marooned many Monroe County families without food or fuel. The Red Cross answered those calls, and many more, with a helping hand. The annual fund raising drive is now underway.

Law Silent On FCC Firings

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)— Rep. Harris (D-Ark) said today the law is silent on how to fire a member of the Federal Communications Commission. He said legislation to plug the gap will be considered by Congress.

Harris heads the House Commerce subcommittee which since Friday has awaited word from FCC Commissioner Richard A. Mack on whether he will resign.

Mack has kept silent on the subject since he told the subcommittee he would seriously consider demands that he quit. The subcommittee is exploring Mack's financial dealings with a friend interested in a Miami television case. Mack's vote in the case coincided with his friend's interests but the commissioner has denied any wrongdoing.

A woman who answered the phone at Mack's home today said the commissioner "will not be available for comment" on the growing ramifications of the controversy which surrounds him.

1955 Appointment

Mack, a Florida Democrat, was appointed to the FCC in 1955 by President Eisenhower.

The Chicago Tribune reported last night that the White House gave Mack an ultimatum to quit or be fired sumarily. James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said, "I don't know anything about it."

Harris said the law governing the FCC is widely interpreted to say the president can appoint an FCC commissioned but cannot fire him.

Mack's friend, Miami lawyer Thurman A. Whiteside, was summoned for two appearances in Washington this week. He is to testify before the House subcommittee Tuesday and appear before a federal grand jury Thursday.

The subcommitee will take testimony tomorrow from National Airlines President G. T. Baker and Alexander Hardy, vice president.

National Airlines' subsidiary, Public Service Television, Inc., won out in the fight for an FCC award of Channel 10 in Miami. Mack voted for Public Service Television.

Toll In Turkey May Reach 400

IZMIT, Turkey, March 2 (AP) — Navy planes and boats searched today for more victims of one of the Middle East's worst maritime disasters, the sinking of the ferry Uskudar.

Newspapers said the toll may reach 350 or 400 lives. Rescue workers said 220 bodies had been recovered. At least 40 persons escaped. Most of those aboard were young students going home for the holidays.

The Uskudar sank in a sudden storm yesterday shortly after clearing the harbor of this naval base port 50 miles east of Istanbul.

When Capt. Mehmet Ashchi, 52, guided the 30-year-old ferry out of this port there was a rising southwest wind—called "loodos". Ten to 15 minutes later the wind picked up and the sea became turbulent.

The wind made the ferry shudder. A great wave crashed against and over her, said ticket collector Kamil Ozocak, one of the survivors.

"Then a second wave hit the ship and it keeled over and I jumped."

Passengers in the lower salon screamed when the ferry listed. They ran to the opposite side but water crashed through the windows and swamped the ferry.

A 17-year-old girl survivor, Mine Soyal, said there was panic.

"Water poured in from the left side of the boat," she said. "My sister and I were on the upper deck. We saw a man rush for life jackets and give them to his wife and child. We did the same."

"About this time people began to scream and cry. The boat leaned more to the left and the water rushed in and I don't know how I got into the sea. I was about an hour in the water. People near me were shouting, 'help, help', but I didn't see my sister.

There is an American base at Izmit, but officials there said they knew of no Americans aboard.

Revisions May Mark New Policy

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP) — The Eisenhower administration plans to review — and may radically revise — the U. S. policy on agreeing with Russia to suspend nuclear weapons tests.

President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles apparently have decided already that several conditions are essential before their policy can be modified.

However, if these conditions are fulfilled, some of the topmost government leaders now believe that the U.S. position will be shifted much closer to that of Russia and in part at least reshaped along lines advocated by Eisenhower's recently resigned disarmament adviser, Harold Stassen.

Major Issue

The policy review reportedly will be the first major issue referred to Dulles' new, blue ribbon board of advisers on disarmament questions. The secretary announced last week that with Eisenhower's approval he had named Walter Bedell Smith, Alfred Gruenther, Robert A. Lovett and John J. McCloy, all former high government officials of broad experience, to counsel him.

The principal conditions of which Dulles and Eisenhower are now thinking, according to the most authoritative information which can be obtained here, significantly omit agreement by the atomic powers to a very close link between suspending atomic tests and cutting off the production of nuclear explosives for atomic weapons.

The Soviets have long objected to this requirement and Stassen has opposed it as blocking an agreement which, he argues, could advance the prospect of an East-West disarmament pact possibly in connection with a summit conference.

Diplomatic negotiations for a summit conference may be discussed at a meeting tomorrow among Eisenhower, Dulles, and Russian Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov. Arrangements for this session were announced by the White House yesterday after Moscow called for an East-West foreign ministers' meeting in April to discuss a summit conference later this year.

Conditions

On the question of suspending atomic weapons tests, the conditions which Eisenhower and Dulles are now reported to consider most important are these:

1. The most vital aspect of U.S. security policy is close cooperation with Allied countries. Therefore any softening of U.S. requirements for test suspensions must be fully acceptable to the NATO powers.

2. British and French needs can only be met if those nations can hereafter test their atomic weapons or if they can obtain information from American tests. This means that another condition is congressional approval of authority for the President to give atomic weapons information to Allied countries.

3. The spring series of U.S. atomic tests must be completed before any suspension agreement is made effective, even if one could be negotiated within the next few months. This seems highly unlikely.

Missing Bride Returns Home After Living On Bus Since Fleeing Brooklyn Residence

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—A pale, weary Irene Arzedi, who vanished five hours before her wedding eight days ago, returned to her weeping Brooklyn family today after a round-trip bus ride to California.

"I don't know myself why I left," Miss Arzedi told newsmen in a timid, barely audible voice.

Thousands crowded the street outside her tenement house as her sobbing mother, speaking Italian, escorted Miss Arzedi inside.

A cheer went up from the neighbors watching the homecoming from fire escapes. Relatives said the young woman locked herself in a bathroom to avoid further talk with newsmen.

The dainty, dark-haired 29-year-old bride-to-be said she had literally lived on a cross-country bus during her mysterious disappearance except for a few hours in Los Angeles before she bought a return ticket to New York.

Strange Flight

Miss Arzedi's strange flight from the big church wedding she planned with Joseph Pinto, 31, on Feb. 22 set off one of the city's most thorough searches. Friends and relatives feared she had met foul play.

Her mother and her elated fiance met her today at a Brooklyn police station and rode with her in a police car to the Arzedi apartment.

Miss Arzedi said she still plans to marry Pinto "at a future date."

"I'm the greatest guy in the world today," exclaimed Pinto.

After arriving at Manhattan's Port Authority Bus Terminal at 3:40 p.m., she telephoned her brother, Carlo, at his Brooklyn apartment.

Miss Arzedi had been seen last at 10:30 a.m. Feb. 22 in a Brooklyn drug store near her home. The proprietor, William Scinapiego, described her as happy at the time and excited as any typical bride-to-be.

Police Station

The thin, soft-spoken woman reluctantly told newsmen at the Brooklyn police station that she began her flight directly after walking out of the drug store. Repeatedly, she said her reasons were personal.

She said she took a subway from Brooklyn to Manhattan. She went to a department store and bought a suitcase and lingerie with a part of $150 cash she had saved to help pay for her honeymoon.

From the department store, Miss Arzedi said she went to the Port Authority Bus Terminal, killed several hours there, finally bought a ticket to Los Angeles, and left at 10:30 p.m.—her wedding night.

She said she did not know why she chose Los Angeles.

Miss Arzedi said she made no acquaintances during the bus trip and did not believe anyone recognized her as the missing bride-to-be who had attracted nationwide attention.

Police said they saw no reason to press Miss Arzedi about details of her trip.

McElroy May Form Opposition

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)— Sen. Bridges (R-NH) said today Secretary of Defense McElroy is going to stir opposition in Congress if he puts a special Pentagon space agency into the business of producing missiles and satellites.

Bridges, senior Republican on the Senate Armed Services and Appropriations committees, said he interprets recent testimony by McElroy as indicating the Advanced Research Projects Agency is intended to become a contract-letting group.

Interview

"There will be stiff opposition in Congress to setting up the Defense Department as an operating agency." Bridges said in an interview. "Congress set it up for policymaking purposes, not to take over the functions of the Army, Navy and Air Force in producing the kind of military hardware they need.

"Now it looks as though McElroy intends to make ARPA a separate service, which would build its own laboratories, hire its own personnel and duplicate a lot of the efforts of the existing services.

"I have no objection to ARPA coordinating the efforts of the three services, either by directing one of them to carry out a certain project or by ordering them to cooperate on a project. But I certainlyt don't favor creating a big new bureau in the Pentagon and adding more employes."

15 Bodies Found In School Bus On Bottom Of River; 12 Passengers Still Missing

PRESTONSBURG, Ky., March 2 (AP)—A school bus containing the mud-smeared bodies of the driver and 14 youngsters was found today in swollen Big Sandy River. Twelve other young passengers on the bus are missing and their bodies are believed mired in the river.

The bus, which careened into the river Friday, was located some 200 yards downstream about eight feet from the opposite shore. The bus was in water about 10 feet deep.

Bulldozers pulled the bus onto the river bank and the body of the driver, John Alex Derossett, was the first removed.

The other bodies were jammed together along the left side of the vehicle. The emergency rear door —where the 21 survivors escaped —was still open.

Top Smashed

The top of the bus was smashed and its hood was battered.

The interior of the bus was lined with mud from the river bottom.

The Coast Guard suspended a weighted net from a bridge across the river about four miles downstream at West Prestonsburg to catch any bodies carried there by the current. Coast Guardsmen and volunteers planned to search the willows along the river banks. A Navy team of divers arranged to make an underwater search for more bodies tomorrow.

The task of removing bodies from the battered bus required an hour and 45 minutes. At the direction of Floyd County Coroner J. J. Carter they were taken in ambulances to the armory in Prestonsburg for identification.

News that the bus was found by searchers working from a barge brought a crowd estimated by state police Billy Lykins at between 4,000 and 5,000 to the Knotley Hollow shores of the flooded river.

It was one of the schoolboy victims who helped locate the bus. His body was spotted by Army and Navy personnel operating electronic sound gear.

A diver plunged into the stream and after helping the barge crew recover the body, he quickly found the submerged bus. It rested on a sand shelf which is normally a part of the low bank. The vehicle was pointed diagonally at the south shore.

The discovery of the bus came just as engineers began a sounding search following two days of fruitless attempts by divers to cope with the swift, turgid river.

Fuchs First To Cross Antarctica

AUKLAND, New Zealand, March 2 (AP)—Dr. Vivian Fuchs and his daring colleagues celebrated with champagne and beer today their historic trek across Antarctica by way of the South Pole.

With the British Commonwealth flags fluttering, they arrived at Scott Base earlier in the day, 99 days after leaving Shackleton Station on the other side of Antarctica.

Never before had man crossed the frozen continent by land and Fuchs had realized a lifelong ambition to be the first to do it.

Last Leg

Fuchs and his nine-man expedition had won victory over blizzards, yawning crevasses and the deadly antarctic Winter that was closing in as they headed down from the highlands on the last leg of their epic journey.

When they came chuggin into Britain's Scott Base at the end of the 2,150-mile trek, they were hemmed in at once. Very pistols shot colored lights. An American band played.

Wtih the expedition was Sir Edmund Hilary, conqueror of Mt. Everest. He had gone out to the 700-mile point and guided the expedition on in along a route he had marked and stocked with supplies on his trip to the South Pole last year.

Looking somewhat dazed amid the excitement around him, Fuchs climbed from the cabin of the leading vehicle with Hillary.

"It's wonderful to be here," said Fuchs.

He was reveling in his first bath in weeks when a radiogram arrived notifying him that Queen Elizabeth will knight him for his achievement.

King To Keep Power In Yemen

CAIRO, March 2 (AP) — King Ahmed will protect his absolute rule in Yemen with a veto power over acts of the federation linking his Arabian kingdom with the United Arab Republic, a semiofficial press report indited today.

The newspaper Al Shaab announced details of the agreement as the formal decision to federate was announced to cheering thousands in Damascus by President Nasser and Crown Prince Saif al Islan al Badr of Yemen.

Al Shaab said Nasser and Ahmed will pointly preside over the federation when it is proclaimed shortly. The Nasser government often uses Al Shaab to release official information.

Supreme Council

The paper said Nasser, president of U. A. R., and Ahmed will form a supreme council with veto power over any decisions relating to the federation.

A broader federal council will be formed of an equal number of members from both countries. It will sit in Yemen.

This council will act on foreign policy and economic, cultural and defense affairs.

Organization Claims Trial As 'Victory'

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—A predominantly Protestant organization today described as "one of the most significant victories of religious tolerance in our times" the conviction of a Roman Catholic Bishop in Italy on a charge of defaming an atheist and his Catholic wife.

Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State offered to back any "bona fide Catholic or ex-Catholic" who wishes to sue his American priest or bishop for "libels or slanders" arising out of Catholic teaching that civil marriage for Catholics results in "low and abominable concubinage."

Six-Day Trial

Bishop Pietro Fiordelli of Prato, Italy, drew a suspended fine yesterday, was charged for the costs of a six-day trial and was ordered to pay $672 damages to a couple who brought suit against him. The suit was instituted by an atheist, Mauro Bellandi, 32, and his wife, Loriana, 23, after the bishop wrote the parish priest that they were "public sinners" because they married outside the Church.

Glenn L. Archer, executive director of POAU, said in a statement the same principle "should be extended to the United States where the Catholic Church teaches the same discriminatory gospel."

Churchill Leaves Bed

Reds Promise To Return 34 On Plane

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Monday, March 3 (AP)—The U.N. Command meets with the North Koreans today to hold the Communists to their promise to return two American pilots and others aboard a detained airliner.

The meeting was arranged after the North Korean Foreign Ministry announced it is willing to release the Americans, a West German couple and any of the 30 South Koreans who want to return home.

Airliner

A spokesman for the U.N. Command said it will be ready to accept any or all of them. If the Communists fail to bring any of them to the meeting site, then a date will be arranged for their return.

The South Korean DC3 airliner was piloted by Willis P. Hobbs of Vallejo, Calif., and Air Force Lt. Col. Howard W. McClelland of Buchanan, Mich., when it vanished into North Korea two weeks ago.

The interview was shown to British viewers today. The German-born Von Braun is chief of research and development of the U.S. Army's Ballistic Missile Agency.

Asked about sending a rocket to the moon, he said the United States could do that now if it was just a matter of "putting a beer can on the moon." But, he added, "Who wants to put a beer can on the moon?"

Men, he said, would be more difficult passengers.

Asked how soon he thought it would be possible to put a man into outer space, Von Braun replied: "I would definitely say within the next five years."

Intellect Attitude Must Be Changed In Education

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles on Monroe County education. Each will be based on the results of the county-wide survey conducted by the author for The Daily Record.)

By Leonard Randolph

A LARGE number of Monroe County educators feel that, if we are to have better education, we must change the existing public attitude that the intellect is something to be ashamed of.

What causes the myth in a certain portion of the public mind?

Although most of those answering questionnaires did not go into detail on the matter, the few who did felt that it was part of a general process of concentration on "generalized" education rather than specific study.

One teacher pointed out that nearly all the "glory" in modern schools goes to the athletic field and virtually no respect is given to the child who cracks the books.

A surprising number of those answering have indicated one other, basically important, thing. Many people feel, their answers indicate, that the "intellectual" child is (1) not well-rounded. (2) physically a weakling or (3) inclined to think in terms of theories rather than applying himself to practical living.

It's a nice myth. But it isn't completely true.

One administrator pleaded the case for a revision of public thinking about the child with high intelligence brilliantly. This answer is worth quoting in full. It represents a well-reasoned approach to the whole idea of the "gifted" child, dealing, as it does, with other "gifts" or "talents" in addition to intellectual ability. Here it is:

"Children with high intelligence tend to be above, rather than below, average in many characteristics. But by virtue of the fact that human abilities are uneven, a child may have a very high IQ and still be rather mediocre in art or mechanics or ability to get along with others. Just because a person has very high abstract intelligence is no guarantee that he will surpass others in practical shrewdness, common sense or ordinary "horse sense."

"In the majority of cases, the mental superiority of the child appears at a very early age in such forms as precocity in learning to talk, greater intellectual curiosity, greater wealth of information and a desire to learn to read.

"Gifted children have a larger fund of play interest and of play information than do unselected children. They also surpass in tests of honesty, trustworthiness and similar moral traits. Gifted children are somewhat superior to their less-intelligent classmates in physical status and health.

"As they mature, intellectually-gifted children are found to be slightly superior to unselected children in health and physique; they average better than the general school population in character traits, emotional stability and social adaptability. Gifted children excel in school progress, measured by promotion to higher grades but they excel when more in mastery of school subjects.

"As a rule, gifted boys maintain their superiority from childhood through adolescence while girls more frequently show a drop of IQ at the time of adolescence or soon thereafter.

Gifted children represent a valuable social asset. Such children are quite resourceful in finding ways of putting their abilities to work, they cannot themselves create an environment that would bring out their full potentialities.

"What often happens is that these gifted children are held back rather than helped. Frequently a bright child becomes a strain upon the teacher, especially if the teacher resents pupils who know more than he or if the child not only knows a great deal on the subject but shows no hesitation in parading his knowledge and correcting others.

"In this controversial and increasingly prominent matter of programs for gifted children, we may have to dive off into colder and deeper water — and swim with vigor and determination."

Blindness Proves Blessing Rather Than Hinderance For Resident Of Bethsaida

"And He cometh to Bethsaida; and they bring a blind man unto Him, and besought Him to touch him."
—Mark VIII:22

IN AFFLICTION, a man may sometimes turn away from his surface confusions to seek the calm of inner thought.

So it was with this unfortunate man of Bethsaida, who had, as a 19th century writer once described blindness, "in the school of darkness learned what mean 'the things unseen.'"

If he had not been deprived of his sight, perhaps he would have been as wicked as the other people of his town, whom Jesus denounced for their impenitence and infidelity.

To avoid the observation of the critical and unbelieving populace, Jesus led the blind man by the hand outside the town.

There He anointed the sightless eyes with spittle, "and put his hands upon him."

"Seest thou ought?" the Savior then asked.

And struggling toward light, which seemed as yet so faint and far off, the blind man answered:

"I see men as trees, walking."

So Jesus once more laid His gentle and healing hands upon the undiscerning eyes, and told the man again to look up.

Gradually, as he strained to see, the moving shadows beyond his pit of darkness took shape and he saw a radiant nimbus that became a Face.

Then other faces came into focus: the visages that reflected the wonder and awe of the disciples who had witnessed miracles before, but each time stared as men awakened from a dream.

But it was the Face of God that his restored vision first beheld that would henceforth be the polestar of this man's life.

He wanted to shout for joy, to announce the miracle of his restoration in every street and in the marketplace of the wicked town.

But Jesus told him instead to return to his home, saying, "Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town."

The people of Bethsaida were not ready for miracles.

Pope Pius Celebrates Anniversaries

VATICAN CITY, March 2 (AP)—The cheers of 10,000 pilgrims, tourists and Romans greeted Pope Pius XII today on this double anniversary. It is his 82nd birthday and 19 years ago he was elected to the throne of St. Peter.

The cheers welling up from St. Peter's Square brought the frail but still energetic and active head of the Roman Catholic Church to the window of his Vatican apartment shortly after noon.

There, as he has on numerous occasions during the 19 years of his pontifical reign, he raised his hands in blessing.

Unusual Event

For the Pope, the day was much like his other days of the year. There were indications, however, that his birthday was saddened by an unusual event in Italy.

This was the verdict late last night by a Florence court convicting one of the pontiff's bishops on a charge of defamation, brought against him by an Italian atheist.

Some sources at the Vatican said that the pontiff had offered his morning Mass today for the bishop of Prato, Pietro Fiordelli, who drew a suspended fine but was ordered to pay $672 damages. This could not be confirmed, however. Only a few intimate members of the pontiff's Vatican household attended the Mass in his private chapel.

During the day, unmarked by any unusual activities by the pontiff, telegrams arrived from many parts of the world. Among the first received were telegrams from Italian Premier Adone Zoli and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Good Health

The pontiff appeared to be in good health as he completed the 19th year of a pontificate that is generally rated here as among the most strenuous and demanding in the church's 2,000 years of history. His private physician describes the pontiff's condition as good.

The major celebration for the pontiff's double anniversary, as in past years, will be held March 12, anniversary of his coronation. At that time a pontifical Mass, which he will attend, will be held in St. Peter's Cathedral.

Filing Returns

Try To Reduce Your Income Tax

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants, in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

IF YOU are one of the millions of American taxpayers who spends the lion's share of his income feeding, clothing, housing and entertaining his family, chances are there is very little you can do to reduce your 1957 federal income tax bill — but you owe it to yourself to try.

First of all, decide which of the two individual tax forms you are going to use to report your income. If you choose the wrong one, you may automatically cut yourself off from a possible tax savings.

The easiest way to file is to use the simple 1040-A Form. It's a card the size of a check, on which you answer a few simple questions and have the choice of either computing your own tax or letting the Government do it for you.

You are permitted to use the card form if your gross income consisted only of wages, dividends or interest totaling less than $5,000, and if you did not have more than $100 of gross income apart from that listed on your W-2 withholding slips.

Before deciding to use the card Form 1040-A, you should consider these facts:

1. Your tax will be figured from a table which allows you a deduction of about 10 percent of your income instead of itemized deductions for contributions, taxes, interest paid, medical and dental expenses, etc.

2. There is no provision in this form for filing as the "head of household", as a "surviving spouse" or for claiming special credits for dividends and retirement income.

If you are sure that these two points would not cost you any tax savings, and your income is within the limits for filing a Form 1040-A, you might as well use this simple card form.

When you elect to use the regular Form 1040, you still must decide whether to itemize deductions or take the standard deduction which usually amounts to about 10 per cent of your income or $1,000, whichever is less. Generally, you will save by itemizing deductions if you:

(1) Own real estate
(2) Had unusual medical expenses
(3) Had deductible child-care expense
(4) Suffered losses from fire, storm, accident or theft
(5) Made fairly large charitable contributions

Generally, it is best for married couples to file joint returns instead of separate individual returns, because the joint return gives them the advantage of income-splitting. That is, their total income is taxed at the rate which would apply if their income were cut in half.

There are a few cases in which separate returns might result in tax saving. When capital losses are involved, for example, it is a good idea to figure both jointly and separately to see which results in the lower tax.

If you are supporting a dependent, although you are unmarried, you may be able to qualify as a "head of household" and figure your tax on a special table that gives you part of the advantage enjoyed by married couples filing joint rturns.

You may qualify for a "head of household" status if you provide more than half the support of a parent and more than half the cost of maintaining the parent's household even if the parent does not live with you. You cannot claim a "head of household" status if you file a Form 1040-A.

The 1040 Form is arranged again this year so that a taxpayer whose income was entirely from wages needs to use only the first one or two pages. Pages three and four are for other types of income and for computing the special credits for dividends and retirement income.

The instructions which come with your tax forms give further information on how to select the correct tax form. Help is also available from the Internal Revenue Service.

VISITING GROUP—The Little Gaelic Singers will appear at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College Wednesday night, under sponsorship of Pocono Community Concerts.

Guidance Of Adults Aid To Little Gaelic Singers

ADULT guidance has aided immeasurably in the standard of performance exhibited by the Little Gaelic Singers, who will appear at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College auditorium Wednesday at 8:30 p.m., as a Pocono Community Concerts sponsored program.

This adult help includes the director, James McCafferty; the baritone soloist, Neil Carlin; and dance director, Breandon DeGlin.

McCafferty, music director of the Little Gaelic Singers, is one of Ireland's leading figures in his field. And although he has been notably successful in developing consistant winners in competition in Ireland, his greatest accomplishments have been with the Little Gaelic Singers.

McCafferty became a professional pianist at the age of 15, has been a regular member of the Radio Eireann, and has been successful as a bass soloist. His job with the Singers is fourfold. He is teacher, conductor, pianist and arranger.

The addition of a solo adult voice to that of a group of child choristers has aided in sustaining audience interest in the concerts of the Little Gaelic Singers. The popular Irish baritone, Neil Carlin, joined the group on its present tour.

Carlin, like the children, is a native of County Derry, but other areas of Ireland are familiar to him also: Cork, Belfast, and Dublin to name only a few. More recently he has starred in various shows and musical comedies on the London stage.

The third adult responsible for the success of the Little Gaelic Singers is its dance director, Breandon DeGlin.

DeGlin conducts what is considered the most prominent school of dance in the entire Emerald Isle. He is an acknowledged authority on the ancient Irish folk dances. With his guidance the Little Gaelic Singers dance with as great enthusiasm and authenticity as they sing.

Walter Seeks Information On Agreement

REP. FRANCIS E. Walter Saturday asked President Eisenhower for "full information" on terms of an "understanding" between the President and vice president for a take-over of power in case the President should become disabled.

The telegraph request, Walter said, was made in his capacity as a member of a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, which has been studying disability legislation.

Concerned

Walter said he is concerned because he cannot see how, without a constitutional amendment, the vice president could act without taking the oath of office as President.

Walter added that if he took such an oath, he would be unable to transfer the authority back to the President if the latter recovered.

Saylor Joins List Of Possible GOP Governor Nominations

Leader Still Battling For Dilworth

HARRISBURG, March 2 (AP)—A new name, that of Rep. John P. Saylor, of Johnstown, got into the discussion today as a receptive candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

On the Democratic side, Gov. Leader got set for a last-ditch fight with party pros to draft Mayor Richardson Dilworth, of Philadelphia, as the organization candidate for governor.

Those were highlights of weekend developments as leaders of both parties headed here for separate sessions tomorrow aimed at hammering out a statewide ticket for the May 20 primary.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders have bogged down on tapping a candidate for governor. Little consideration has been given, at least on surface developments, to candidates for other places on the ticket, U.S. senator, lieutenant governor, and secretary of internal affairs.

Gov. Leader alone has been discussed as the Democratic candidate for the senate. But he has reportedly told party leaders at other conferences he would not make the race unless a candidate acceptable to him is selected for governor.

Saylor, who represents the 22nd Congressional District composed of Cambria, Indiana and Armstrong counties, said at Johnstown:

"I'd be highly honored to run for governor of Pennsylvania, if the Republican party asks me."

Saylor, by that qualified statement, placed himself in the slate-making discussions in the same position as several other receptive candidates, including John M. Walker, Allegheny County commissioner; Judge Henry X. O'Brien, Pittsburgh, and state Sen. Douglas H. Elliott, vice president of Wilson College, Chambersburg.

N. D. Rowland Jr., and Donald D. Dunkle, Lancaster County physicians, launched the Saylor boom through a postcard campaign to county leaders across the state.

"I'm not a candidate at the present time and I'm not going to run unless I'm drafted," Saylor commented. "I'm highly honored that a group of citizens and not political leaders think enough of me to start a grass roots movement in my behalf."

Conference

George I. Bloom, Republican state chairman, called county chairmen into Harrisburg tomorrow to go over the situation and see if agreement could be reached on an organization slate.

The announced GOP candidates for governor, in addition to Walker, are William S. Livengood Jr., former secretary of internal affairs, Maj. Gen. Daniel B. Strickler, former lieutenant governor, and Harold E. Stassen, president Eisenhower's former disarmament aide.

Party leaders, from Bloom down, have taken only one position in the gubernatorial scramble — they're against Stassen.

Bloom reportedly favors Arthur T. McGonigle, Reading pretzel manufacturer, as a "new face" type of candidate for governor. But there is a host of other potential or receptive candidates hoping to be tagged.

For U.S. senator, Reps. James E. Van Zandt, Altoona, and Hugh Scott, Philadelphia, have been discussed. Weldon Heyburn, former auditor general and former state treasurer, has been mentioned as a compromise candidate either for governor or the senatorship.

Gov. Leader indicated strongly over the weekend he would go into another slatemaking session Monday prepared to fight Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh and U.S. Rep. William J. Green Jr., Philadelphia chairman, to get Dilworth as his running mate.

Dilworth withdrew as a potential candidate for the gubernatorial nomination two weeks ago. But Leader then launched a "draft Dilworth" movement which ran into opposition from Lawrence. The latter denied a split with Leader but said they had a difference of opinion. Green opposed Dilworth from the start of the slatemaking discussions.

"Any report that I have given up hope that Mayor Dilworth will be a candidate for governor is completely erroneous," the governor said Saturday.

L. C. Phipps, Former U. S. Senator, Dies

LOS ANGELES, March 2 (AP)—Lawrence C. Phipps, 95, who helped Andrew Carnegie build his steel company and later served two terms in the U.S. Senate from Colorado, died last night.

Phipps joined the Carnegie company in Pittsburgh as an 18-year-old mill hand and was one of its top executives when it merged with the U.S. Steel Co. in 1900.

He retired to Denver at the age of 38 as one of the largest individual stockholders in the newly formed giant of the steel industry.

Phipps was elected to the Senate in 1918 and re-elected in 1924. Federal aid for highway construction and the building of Hoover Dam were two of the programs he was closely identified with during his Senate career.

Second Term

He retired at the end of his second term in 1931 and since then had devoted himself to his wide-ranging business investments and his large family. He died at his winter home in Los Angeles after a brief illness.

He leaves his widow, three sons, Lawrence, Allan and Gerald Phipps, all of Denver; and three daughters, Mrs. William White of Haverford, Pa., and Mrs. Van Holt Garrett and Mrs. Donald Bromfield of Denver.

Private funeral services will be conducted Wednesday in Denver.

Phipps, who was born in Amityville, Pa., the son of a Methodist minister, started with Carnegie at $30 a month. He was one of several promising young men the steel tycoon later selected from the ranks of employes to become partners in his company.

Phipps was the last survivor of the Carnegie Veterans Assn., an organization of former Carnegie executives who banded together after the company went out of existence as part of the huge U.S. Steel combination.

Public Life

Phipps first entered public life through the Red Cross, in which he became particularly active during World War I. He was recognized as a leader of the conservative faction of the Republican party in Colorado long before he ran for the Senate, his first and only elective office.

Despite his official status as a retire businessman, Phipps acquired a financial interest in many concerns after moving to Colorado notably the Denver and Salt Lake Railway and the California Electric Power Co., which was organized to bring electricity to the Nevada gold fields and is now a major Southern California utility.

Phipps was married three times. His first wife, Isabelle Hill Loomis died in 1888. His second marriage to Genevieve W. Chandler of Pittsburgh ended in divorce. In 1911 he married Margaret Rogers of Denver.

THE EXECUTIVE Board of Saint Matthews Confraternity of Christian Doctrine held monthly meeting at the Catholic Information Center in the Indian Queen Hotel.

There were 15 members in attendance including Father Francis Barrett, James Murphy, Joseph Dane, Oliver Weber, Edward Boushell, Charles Zateeny, George LaBar, Frank Murphy, Harry Mullins, Dick Dishman, James Cox Sr., Dr. Frank McGuire, John Brent, Arthur Malloy, and Bernard Frantz.

Each group in the CCD gave its report.

Parish Survey

The Teacher group, chairman James Cox Sr., reported that its attendance for the first semester was much better than in the past, but that there were still a few who did not attend and that members of the "Fishers" were going to speak to the parents of these children.

The Apostolates of Good Will were represented by Mullins. He reported that they had finished the first book of the Discussion Club "God Man, God Man". History's Top Funeral In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, March 2 (AP) — Harry Cohn, the movie dictator who most everybody cussed, had the biggest funeral in Hollywood history today — and in a unique setting.

Some 1,500 movieland personalities took over every available inch of huge soundstage 12 at Columbia Pictures to hear two famous comedians conduct memorial services for Cohn.

His body lay in state under the huge Columbia trademark while banks of flowers stacked 12 feet high stretched 100 yards around the stage.

Danny Kaye, who delivered a eulogy, explained the unusual setting:

"Without irreverence, this was Harry Cohn's cathedral. This is where he lived and worked and dreamed, and this is where his energies, ambitions and visions gave reality to those dreams.

"This is where the fierceness of the flame that was within him burned some and warmed others."

There was no clergyman at the scene or at the private entombment in Hollywood Cemetery, except for a Catholic priest who accompanied Mrs. Cohn.

Mrs. Cohn, the former actress Joan Perry, is Roman Catholic, as are the three Cohn children. Danny Thomas delivered a prayer at the rites.

Cohn was Jewish, but had specified in his will that the rites be nondenominational.

Cohn, reported to have made more enemies in Hollywood than any other studio boss, must have had a lot of friends, too. They were all there, studio employes, carpenters, bit players and big stars such as Kim Novak and Glenn Ford.

Tobyhanna Signal Depot Operators Pile Up Million Miles Of Safe Driving In 1957

TOBYHANNA — More than 1,000,000 miles of safe driving in government vehicles was chalked up by Tobyhanna Signal Depot personnel during 1957, according to Ray Davies, safety director, who lives at 115 Elizabeth St., Stroudsburg.

The 114 drivers of motor vehicles and material handling equipment who were responsible for the record received U. S. Army safety awards last month.

In motor vehicle driving, Edward Monozka of the motor pool amassed the most safe driving miles last year, 16,616. Samuel LeRose, also of the motor pool was second with 16,207 miles.

Of drivers of material handling equipment, James Pappas, storage division, recorded the most safe driving hours in 1957, a total of 1,417.

Davies reports the depot in 1957 had the lowest rate of accidents in its four-year history. Its accident ratio of .37 for 100,000 miles of driving was better than the objective of .41 set for the depot by the Chief Signal Officer, Washington, D.C.

Garment Workers Plan For Meeting To Set Strike Date

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Garment Workers President David Dubinsky has scheduled a union meeting tomorrow to set a definite date for a strike that would effect 100,000 workers in seven eastern states.

Dubinsky indicated the strike might come Tuesday.

Affected by the walkout would be 57,000 workers in New York City and more than 43,000 others in New York State, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Both Sides Ready

Dubinsky made his announcement yesterday at the end of a 40-minute session with employer representatives. Although the negotiations remained unresolved, union and employer spokesmen said they would hold themselves ready for further bargaining meetings.

The union is seeking a 15 per cent wage boost in selaries that now average $2.10 an hour.

Louis Rubin, spokesman for the dress industry, said the group's final offer was a five per cent wage increase plus fringe benefits.

He said the industry could not afford to offer more during the present business recession.

Hotel To Operate TV 'Network'

PHILADELPHIA, March 2 (AP) —Philadelphia's newest hotel—the 1,000-room Sheraton in the heart of the city—soon will have its own television network.

"Network" is am ambitious word, general manager Lloyd B. Carswell said, adding that for the time being the qualifying quotes were not out of place.

But he went on: "This is a for the American hotel industry — live programming several hours a day, from our own studio, providing special services to guests, varied entertainment, even appropriate commercials once in a while.

Low Price

"The system is being installed for less than $10,000, and if our experiment is successful, we may indeed have a true network, covering the Sheraton chain, which has 47 hotels in the United States and Canada."

The programming, expected to start the middle of the month, will include convention meetings, music, perhaps comedy bits, news and other telecasts beamed on a closed circuit to sets in all the rooms. The telecasts will be received on Channel 7, which is open in this area."

"With our own camera chain," Carswell said, "we can cover events anywhere in the motel and transmit to standard TV sets in guest rooms and to large-screen projectors in the various function rooms as well." The camera, itself, weighs only five pounds.

Soviet Switch Brings Quick Reaction

LONDON, March 2 (AP) — Diplomatic circles in West European capitals have a feeling that Nikita Khrushchev wants a summit conference to strengthen his position at home.

That was one reaction to the Soviet Union's abrupt switch yesterday in agreeing to a foreign ministers' conference as a prelude to a top-level talk. They had balked at a foreign ministers meeting before.

The Soviet Communist party chief is known to have domestic problems, particularly opposition to his plan to sell state agricultural machinery to collective farms in an attempt to boost production.

At All Costs

French government circles said privately that the Soviets seem determined to have a summit meeting at all costs.

West Germany thinks the Russians want top-level talks but Bonn is suspicious of their motives.

The sudden switch in Moscow tactics was not surprising to experienced diplomatic observers.

The plain talk of President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Macmillan had clearly put Soviet Premier Bulganin on the defensive.

In their replies to his series of letters, Eisenhower and Macmillan have made plain that there must be some prospect of success before any top level meeting can be held.

Signal Depot Employes Sign For Vaccine

TOBYHANNA — Hundreds of employes at Tobyhanna Signal Depot are signing up for Salk anti-polio shots under the voluntary Civilian Welfare Council program being supervised by Dr. Donald J. Werner, depot physician.

Welfare Council President James McGraw described the response as "terrific" and said, "Almost everyone who hadn't been inoculated before signed up here."

Cost Sharing

Cost of the vaccine is being shared by participating employes, who paid 60 cents each for their inoculations.

In applying for the program, they waived all future claims against the government, a technicality called for by Army regulations.

Summerfield Denounces Pay Raises

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP) — Postmaster General Summerfield today denounced as "completely unjustified" a postal pay raise such as that voted by the Senate Friday night.

Speaking in a TV interview with Rep. Ostertag (R-NY) filmed before the Senate action, Summerfield did not say whether he would recommend that President Eisenhower veto the bill, which still must be acted on by the House.

Asked about a House committee-approved measure to raise the pay of the half - million postal workers 15 per cent, however, Summerfield termed it "completely unjustified."

Unfortunate

He said: "Some of the bills that have been introduced, I think, are most unfortunate. In the first place, they are not justified. Second, there isn't much possibility of them becoming law."

The Senate combined into one bill a boost to 5 cents for stamps needed on out-of-town letters and a 12½ per cent increase in postal workers' pay. The administration wants the stamp charges raised but sought only a six per cent increase in postal workers' pay.

The Senate rate increases would bring in about 732 million dollars a year for the next three years, but Senate pay boosts would offset this.

Still Not Satisfactory

Congress has failed, despite frequent prodding over the years, to agree on what measures shall be taken in the event a President becomes incapacitated and either refuses to resign or is unable to do so because of his condition.

President Eisenhower, both before and after his two serious illnesses, appealed to Congress to work out an acceptable arrangement before—not after—the need arises to replace a President.

Apparently disturbed because the lawmakers have failed to act, Mr. Eisenhower now says he has reached a clear, workable understanding with Vice President Nixon on what the latter should do if the President becomes unable to perform his duties.

Unfortunately, from a public standpoint, he does not spell out in detail how this arrangement would work. Thus, a number of important questions which every citizen should know are left unanswered.

For example, would it be a temporary or permanent transfer of authority? And would Mr. Nixon merely take over the functions of the presidency, while continuing as vice president pending the President's recovery, or would he actually vacate his present post and automatically ascend to the highest office?

Also, has Mr. Eisenhower already dictated a letter of resignation which the Vice President would be authorized to submit to Congress in case the President is stricken with a critical illness? Furthermore, is the agreement which the two men have reached a written or verbal one, and is it within the legal limits of the Executive Branch to come to an understanding which would be binding under all circumstances?

We're happy to learn the two officials are in close harmony on the procedures which should be followed if something unforeseen happens to the President. But we feel the arrangement should be made a matter of public record immediately, even though it might be only a stop-gap pact.

We're inclined to think that perhaps Messrs. Eisenhower and Nixon are using their agreement as a means to spur Congress into passing the disability legislation so often requested. Whether the solution is to be a constitutional amendment or some other satisfactory law does not matter so much as how speedily it can be accomplished. Congress should not shirk its responsibility. It should act now.

Governor's Round

This has been a busy week for Governor Leader. And if he did not sweep the lists in the political jiu-jitsu at Harrisburg, he appears to have made an exceptionally good showing in the economic wrestling at Washington which immediately followed.

The Governor made a high-speed tour of the Federal officialdom Thursday, with the intent of going to the mat with anyone who stood in the way of a speedup for public works projects in Pennsylvania. The idea is to get job-producing work on the move to trim unemployment.

Mr. Leader, as a Democrat, presumably expected trouble from Republican administrators—particularly after the announced plan of Pennsylvania GOP Congressmen to snub him. But he was agreeably surprised. Seven out of the 17 Republican congressmen recanted and met with him. And the Federal bureaucracy showed a "sense of urgency" about the economic situation which the Governor found encouraging.

He was able to come home with assurances of red-tape cutting on $28 million of highway construction including Philadelphia expressways, on river and harbor spending, on slum clearance and public housing.

The fact that a Governor has to go to Washington for such wrestling is a commentary on the interwoven fabric of Federal-State-local government these days. But the fact that such trips can be pleasant and promising is all to the good. It means that political adversaries can and sometimes do put the general welfare ahead of routine partisanship.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Promotion Overdue

Washington, March 2—The Navy is again in hot water over Rear Admiral Hyman Rickover, noted "father of the atomic submarine.

For the second time in five years, bipartisan leaders of the Joint Atomic Committee are insisting the Navy promote its outstanding nuclear authority — in this instance to a three-star vice admiral.

As previously, the reason for this latest demand is word that 58-year-old Rickover is slated for retirement.

In 1953, as a captain, he had been twice "passed over" by selection boards and was earmarked for shelving. At that time, Rickover was doggedly endeavoring to persuade skeptical and indifferent Navy chiefs to build an atomic submarine — which subsequently became the history-making USS Nautilus.

Discovery of the backstage plan to get rid of him aroused a storm of protest in Congress.

A powerful group, led by Rep. Melvin Price (D.,Ill.), head of the Joint Atomic Research Subcommittee, thretened legislation to block this move if the Navy persisted in it. Shortly thereafter, a special selection board was convened and Rickover was elevated to rear admiral.

Since then, his work in the nuclear field has greatly expanded. He now "wears two hats."

Rickover is assistant chief of the Navy's Bureau for Nuclear Propulsion, and also chief of the Naval Reactor Division of the Atomic Energy Commission. More than 1,200 scientists, engineers and technicians are under his command in these two agencies.

But despite the scope and importance of his responsibilities, Rickover has not been promoted since his original two-star rank.

Serving Notice — This has been bluntly pointed out to Navy Secretary Thomas Gates, Jr.

He was also sternly warned against any attempt to ditch Rickover by putting him on the retired list.

These strong admonitions were conveyed by Rep. Price, who is again leading the backstage fight in behalf of Rickover. Foremost among those actively supporting that are: Representatives Carl Durham (D.,N.C.), chairman of the Joint Atomic Committee; James Patterson (R.,Conn.); Chet Holifield (D., Calif.); Paul Kilday (D.,Tex.); and Senators Richard Russell (D., Ga.), chairman of the Armed Services Committee and Henry Jackson (D.,Wash).

"A promotion for Admiral Rickover is long overdue," Price told Gates. "We cannot understand why an officer of his exceptional abilities and accomplishments has not been given the recognition he so richly merits. We are particularly disturbed because of information that he is to go before a selection board this year and may be retired. That is inconceivable in these critical times and the urgent need for him."

Gates expressed confidence that Rickover will not be shelved.

"There are no plans to do that at this time that I know of," Gates said. "You can be assured I will look into the matter, particularly regarding a promotion to Vice Admiral."

"We're glad to hear that," declared Price. "We are following this matter very closely, and if it becomes necessary we will take it up directly with President Eisenhower."

Under Navy regulations, a rear admiral can be retired after 35 years of service or seven years in grade. Rickover has been in the Navy 38 years, and a Rear Admiral for five years.

Hollywood — The reason Bob Wagner came limping back from his honeymoon was a fall suffered on the boat.

He tore some ligaments in his ankle and will have to keep it taped for several weeks.

Natalie Wood tells me they came back from Catalina in a pea-soup fog and she doesn't know how they would have made it without a radio directional finder which Bob's father gave them for a present.

Both she and Bob gained weight on their honeymoon.

"On your cooking?" I asked.

"My cooking," laughed Natalie, "is limited to the boat. We have a housekeeper to do it at home." Incidentally, home will continue to be Bob's bachelor apartment. Natalie may have to do a picture in Europe this summer. They are going to stay in Bob's place until they decide to get a house.

Good Evening Ladies!

Its Splendor Outlandish

By Ken Duvall

Of course, I make all the important decisions at our house, such as what tie I should wear on any given day, whether I should have a second cup of coffee at dinner and whether I feel good or not, so I suppose I had just gotten used to being master around here and that is why I said that our bathroom was good enough.

It's a good old-fashioned Utilitarian room with an oblong tub, tile floor and walls, useful mechanical devices and a medicine cabinet in which to keep last year's cold medicines, rusty bobby pins and some tangled hairnets. Not a pretty place, exactly, but an asylum nevertheless. Honestly, I never suspected that a bathroom should be a sanctuary for the psyche.

But that's what it said in a magazine article, a bathroom should be a sanctuary for the psyche, and there were illustrations that make our bathroom look like Grandpa Patrick's favorite haven back on the farm. That certain party, whose name I am forbidden ever to mention here, and now threatens to divorce me if I ever do, detected the difference between Cyd Charisse's bathroom and ours at first glance.

To a yokel like me, Cy's bathroom looked like the foyer of Lord & Taylor's formal gown display room. She has, said the article, a circular sunken tub of turquoise and white terrazzo. Sliding glass doors open onto a plant-filled patio, screened by walls of Indian grillwork and opaque plastic, and near her tub Cyd has a silver telephone. The furniture is upholstered in leopard skin and a chaise percee conceals a fundamental plumbing fixture, which I would have thought wouldn't even be tolerated in such a bathroom.

Another Elaborate One

Hope Hampton was pictured in an equally gorgeous bathroom, also upholstered in leopard skin and she posed in it wearing leopard skin pants and blouse which, I assume, she always dons before going to the bathroom. As for me, I'd never think of entering such a place in everything less than white tie and tails, even in the middle of the night.

Needless to say, both these magnificent toilettes, are equipped with divans, coffee tables, smoking stands, liquor cabinets, television and radio consoles and just about everything for garcious living. With a few cans of food, one could withstand a siege of several weeks in either of them.

Well, that certain party went completely nuts. We, she said, are going to do something about that broom closet we call a bathroom, whether we can afford it or not. That was when I said our bathroom was good enough.

I said, well, we can't afford it and at my age I'm not about to change my habits so drastically, and, anyway, my psyche doesn't need a sanctuary as long as I have a key to the executive washroom at the office. Moreover, I said, remembering I am master in this house, if that bathroom is changed into anything even remotely resembling Taj Mahal, I'll move out of our chambre a coucher, which is French for bedroom, since we're getting so hoity toity.

A man will be around next week to give us an estimate.

Political Factions Ride High

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — The somewhat grim-faced men and women—key blocks in both the Democratic and Republican parties in Pennsylvania — who sit down around separate conference tables today in the shadow of Capitol Hill to hammer out their respective tickets, have been virtually lost in the political woods.

The circumstances provide one of the most unusual settings on the Pennsylvania scene in many a year—unusual primarily from the sheer dramatics of the thing.

It is true that heretofore there have been squabbles and differences over places on the statewide tickets.

But it is true also that attempts at lining up tickets for this year's gubernatorial-senatorial run-off actually have reached an unprecedented high point in chin-jutting standoffishness of factional powers within each party.

Both are running down to the wire at an almost even pace—without having arrived at any firm conclusion at this late date.

There is a logical spell-out for this unusual condition.

See Opportunity

Point One: Democrats are whetting their knives on a grindstone shaped around the single fact that for the first time in nearly 20 years they have reason to believe they have a winning chance this year.

Already in office on Capitol Hill, hopes are running higher than they ever have been that they can remain in the gubernatorial saddle.

It is far different from the dispirited days of defeat — routine defeat — of only a few years ago.

Point Two: Republicans on the other hand are equally as spirited. The conviction is general among GOP old pols that 1958 once again will be "their year"—with a return to a GOP administration.

They look upon the past three years of the Democratic Leader Administration — now —as an "interlude" to be ended this Fall.

In all of this the important fact seems to be that each is confident of a win this Fall —and it shoud be a close decision—with the result that the candidate sparring has reached a notch or two above the boiling point.

In the slate-making sessions scheduled for today by both Democrats and Republicans, each is shooting basically for a so-called "organization" gubernatorial candidate — the major fly in the ointment of each.

Lost in the backwash—for the moment at least—is the question of coming up with a candidate for lieutenant - Governor, an office viewed for the most part as something to be taken care of later when there is more beer-and-skittle time.

Not waiting for this however was the weekend announcement by Senate Majority Leader Roland B. Mahany, Titusville attorney, that he is seeking the second spot nod on the Republican ticket.

To veterans around Capitol Hill the Mahany decision makes sense — although to some of the flat-chested old pols within the GOP it doesn't.

Significantly, bull-throated Mahany has been the bread-and-butter legislative leader for the GOP in the upper chamber. Since the mid-point of the 1953 session of the Legislature when he was bulled in to take over the Senate GOP leadership from high-spirited John M. Walker, the Crawford County lawmaker has led the Republican Senate floor show.

It is a spot GOP chieftains would do well to think about more than casually — rather than as a gubernatorial bargaining item.

A couple of French tourists, winding up an extensive tour of the United States, passed an old folks' home. The inmates were rocking back and forth vigorously in their chairs on the porch.

Jim Riley Says:

Some People Didn't Remember

Our words of warning last week apparently went unheeded.

We wrote at great length on the heavy snow, warm temperatures and possible rain and what might be the result.

But, at the same time we pointed out that there was no need for panic at anytime. We explained how the County Commissioners and the Civil Defense Council had made extensive plans for any sort of an emergency.

The article didn't make any great promises, but it did point out that our various officials were doing all in their power to combat any type of emergency.

But, we apparently wound up talking to ourselves.

Instead of taking the recent rain in stride, making checks with Civil Defense or The Daily Record, many people were swept up in a wave of false stories.

At no time during last week's rain did the streams of Monroe County even threaten to go over their banks. Yet, half-truths and wild stories circulated the area, scaring many people without reason.

Stories heard concerning possibilities of floods should be checked and double checked before being passed further.

Better than passing stories, would be an in-person check where the opportunity presents itself.

The only trouble caused by the recent rain was from surface water. This damage occurred because drains were still clogged with snow and the water had no place to run. It flooded highways in several spots and caused minor rerouting.

Other than that there was no damage or inconvenience.

When CD is alerted, there is no license for alarm in any quarter.

By being alerted Civil Defense is given an advance on possible trouble. The word "possible" should be emphasized.

The greatest good anyone can do in an emergency or a threat of emergency is to spread a degree of calmness. A panic stricken person is useless in any serious situation.

Many people should have learned a lesson last week. Rain and snow don't necessarily have to cause a flood. This fact we learned first hand.

The three Cs should be our guide, Check, Caution and Common sense.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Does That Make It Right?

Egbert White, vice president of "Business International," makes a point in a letter he addressed to me that needs discussion from the standpoint of the taxpayer, because when the government in Washington spends money, it comes from us, the taxpayers.

Therefore, if there are two kinds of citizens, those who pay taxes and those who evade taxes, the evaders have a double unfair advantage over the honest Johns. The evaders not only keep their money but they also force the rest of us to pay more than we should.

So every tax-evader is a personal enemy of every taxpayer and let us face it that way. Egbert White says, however, that it is unfair to state the case as bluntly as all that. He gives several reasons, of which I shall discuss what there is room for:

"That it is US foreign policy, supported by both parties, to encourage private investment abroad.

"That private investment abroad is greatly increased if profits earned abroad can be reinvested abroad without paying the US tax of 52 per cent."

True. But what has that to do with the basic proposition that those who do pay taxes are penalized because the tax-evaders and tax-avoiders have discovered gimmicks for operating without paying any taxes at all? Furthermore, some of this money comes back into the United States to raid American industries in such anonymous forms and in association with obscurely held money, that nobody can trace what the true ownership is:

Comes Back Here

There is another point. Much of the profits of American investments abroad is kept abroad and comes back as manufactured products, such as British Ford cars, Vauxhall cars, Opel cars, etc.

The European-manufactured car, financed by American money, is beginning to make a dent in the American market at a time when the American automobile industry is sick and large numbers of workers are being laid off. I cite this as one example; there are many others.

The fact that our government approves of this inequity does not make it right.

I would like to know how much of our huge investment in Canada has come back to the United States to be taxed; how much of it has been kept for permanent reinvestment in countries that benefit by imperial preference; how much of it finds its way back in the form of manufactured goods to undersell American products in the American market.

I have seen no full figures on this subject anywhere, nor do I believe that they exist, just as no full data exist on the number of American accounts in Swiss banks or in Liechtenstein corporations which keep their money in Swiss banks or in Bahamian or Liberian or Venezuelan banks.

In this connection, I wish to recommend to those who are interested this book: "Tax Factors in Basing International Business Abroad," published by the Law School of Harvard University. It is the most thorough study extant on the subject of beating taxes by finding the shelter of a tax haven abroad.

One of these cases cited in this book is United States v. Klein which is current and in many ways fascinating. Let me quote:

". . . The defendants organized a number of Cuban and Panamanian corporations which ostensibly purchased Canadian whisky for sale in the United States. The whisky was invoiced to a base company but was shipped directly from the Canadian distillery to American buyers.

"The difference between the purchase price in Canada and the sales price in the United States was accumulated in a base company. In spite of the fact that no sales, promotional, or administrative functions were performed by the base companies, Judge Sugarman, in dismissing the first four counts of the indictment, declared:

"'(A) reasonable person could not conclude that those corporations were a sham. They observed corporate formalities in their structure and functioning; they billed the American distributors for the whisky; they collected for it; they paid their suppliers for it; they maintained active bank accounts in Cuba, New York and Canada in their own names and deposited therein and withdrew therefrom large sums in many transactions; in fact they did everything normally to be expected in the sale of over thirty-eight million dollars worth of whisky at wholesale in the three years of their operation.'"

But what about the taxes? Who paid them?

On Broadway —by Walter Winchell

Memo to all the troupers, great and small, who have dueled for the most precious accolade within the gift of filmdom — and lost.

The industry counts its mummers by the thousands, but only 23 living women and 21 living men hold the top Academy Award for acting. These are the elite of the screen world. In their tinsel crowns shine real jewels—the performances that won the prize. Yet, some performances that lost by a hair, shine almost as brightly in memory as those that topped them. Their only fault was in their timing: Had they been given in years when the competition was less breath-taking, they might have won. So, with the Big Night coming up again (March 26), here's a salute to console some of the Oscar winners who might have been.

Who will ever forget Garbo's Camille or Janet Gaynor in "A Star Is Born"? Both performances came in the same year, yet neither got the Oscar. That was when Luise Rainer swept the boards with her exquisite O-Lan in "The Good Earth." And the year before that, it was Rainer's consummate Anna Held of "The Great Ziegfeld" that shut out both Irene Dunne's delicious comedy performance in "Theodora Goes Wild" and Gladys George's handkerchief-drencher in "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie"—both contenders of top caliber.

And, if imitation is the sincerest flattery, what about Charles Laughton's Captain Bligh, which became part of the repertoire of every mimic? That happened to be the year Victor McLaglen surpassed himself (and everybody else) and won the award as Gyppo Nolan in "The Informer." Bligh came out a loser, too. And "Informer," though recognized as one of the all-time greats, lost to the masterly "Mutiny on the Bounty." And Frank Lloyd, who directed "Mutiny," lost to John Ford, who directed "Informer." How's that for a handful of broken blossoms?

But I give you 1939—there, ladies and gentlemen, was the year of vintage years. It gave us Bette Davis in "Dark Victory," Robert Donat and Greer Garson in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Dunne and Boyer in "Love Affair" (just remade as "An Affair to Remember"), Frank Capra's "Stagecoach" (with John Wayne and Claire Trevor), Judy Garland in "The Wizard of Oz," Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon in "Wuthering Heights," Burgess Meredith and Lon Chaney, Jr., in "Of Mice and Men." All lost—but to the picture of pictures, "Gone With the Wind." And the top acting awards went to Vivien Leigh's Scarlett O'Hara and Donat's "Mr. Chips." All the others were also-rans—just like you.

CUTIES —By E. Simms Campbell

Bible Thought

Jesus answered and spake to them in parables. Matt. 22:1.

The human mind does not often retain long winded dissertations. No one ever forgets a mental picture, an allustration. Even children understood him.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

All right, you hounded me into it—housecleaning, I mean. Though I'll have to admit that the farthest I got was putting Christmas tree ornaments away. But that involves going up in the attic, and going up in the attic involves all sorts of explorations.

New homes with no attics and no cellars are going to have to evolve a whole new breed of women—women who can throw out anything the moment its usefulness is over. That would be easy enough for anyone, if only you could decide just when that moment was.

Certainly it was from sentiment alone that I kept the drawing book that Nancy brought home from kindergarten labeled "All About Me." And I had already put the children's books in with the load to be taken to the Book Fair, when I changed my mind and hauled them all up to the attic again, because just the sight of them brought back so many memories of bright blond heads popping up from the pillows to ask for "just one more chapter" refore bed-time.

So what did Nancy ask for in her last letter from school? "Any old drawings we did as children for art class, and my old books especiallly Roller Skates and Caddy Woodlawn for children's lit class." So, see.

Of course it took time to find them, and in the process I did have moments of doubt about whether anybody anywhere would ever want the potty chair, the easel blackboard with the broken leg, or the bathinette with all the rubber gone, that I had to move first.

But me and the pack rats just keep storing things away—and if all the people who ask me why I din't move into a smaller place in town could see my attic, they'd know why. And if anybody needs a shuttlecock with all the feathers off I know right where to lay my hands on one.

Typing Skill Often Serves As Job "Insurance Policy"

"There are two things every girl should have," a forthright friend of mine said recently, "and those are naturally curly hair and the ability to type. With them, she can sail through life with a minimum of trouble."

She has a point.

But while there isn't much you can do about the hair, the ability to type is within anyone's power. If you have it, it will see you over a lot of life's major and minor problems.

Typing Skill Helped

Just in the past year, for example, I've seen four cases where having typing skill helped in a major crisis.

Miss A., for example, is a junior in college. When her father died, after a long illness, Miss A. had to earn enough money to see herself through college and to help out a little at home.

Her phenomenal typing speed helped her to do it. If she had had to take clerical or waitressing jobs, she would not have been able to complete her education.

Finishing His Education

Mrs. B. is a young wife with two small babies and a husband who is finishing his education at night. His salary is very small and will continue to be til he gets his college degree.

If it weren't for the fact that she has been able to set up a home typing service, they'd be starving to death. Also, she'd be so lonesome in the evenings while he was in college, that their lives would be miserable.

Miss C. is a retired science teacher, a peppy woman in her late sixties.

Because she is a fast typist, she was able to get a part-time job typing manuscripts for a research scientist who writes many articles and books. She combined her typing skill with her knowledge of science and was able to get a job that most retired people would envy.

Left To Marry

Mrs. D. was nearly a home economist. That is, she was studying home economics during her first year of college, then left to get married. And now that she has married off her fifth and last daughter, she has a job as receptionist-typist with a food company.

At her age, 58, this would have been well nigh impossible without typing.

As you can see, a typing skill is a kind of insurance policy. With it, you can write your own ticket in many of life's way stations.

If you'd like to learn typing, but can't afford the time to go to school, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope, care of this newspaper, and I'll send you my pamphlet, "How To Learn Typing At Home."

Preview Of Puppet Plays Written For TV Tonight At AAUW Open Program

A PREVIEW of two short puppet plays, scheduled for a television audition in the near future, will mark the meeting of the American Assn. of University Women tonight at 8 at the Stroud Community House.

Miss Emily Edwards, who turned from art to writing after her retirement, is the author of the plays which deal with problems of the aging and which are samples of the 15 plays she has written for television production.

Miss Edwards, a graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago, was for many years an art teacher. She was in charge of the art department at Hull House in Chicago, studied in Mexico with William Zorach, famous sculptor, and worked in Provincetown where she first became interested in making puppets.

After her retirement, she studied with the Walt Foundation, a project named in honor of Walt Whitman, and offering a year of college work to people over 65 who could pass the rigid physical examinations. In the course of the year, the students' objective was to discover their major interest. It was here that Miss Edwards turned from art to writing, and the plays are a result.

Voices in the plays to be produced tonight will include Ralph Smith and Miss Kathryn McFarland of the college speech department, and David Mazer. Managing the puppets will be Mrs. Glenn Sanborn and Mrs. Wendell Wicks, with Mrs. J. L. Cohen, and Mrs. Fern Stowell.

The public is invited to attend the program.

Sewing Circle Marks 60th Anniversary With Report Of This Year's Work

Canadensis—The Sewing Circle of the Methodist Church celebrated its 60th anniversary with a covered dish luncheon and entertainment on Thursday, Feb. 27 in the church, with 65 people present. Mrs. Isabelle Brewer, a charter member was presented a corsage and Mrs. Mary Seese and Mrs. Amanda Heckman, also charter members who were unable to attend, were sent corsages. The tables were decorated with pansies, forsythia and carnations.

After the buffet luncheon Mrs. Reeve Price, president, welcomed everyone and Rev. Moore introduced Rev. Charles Eichman, pastor of the Canadensis Moravian Church. Mrs. Liza Price, treasurer, gave a resume of the work done by the Circle.

The largest money raising events of the past year were the three bazaars at which a total of $1,439.25 was realized. A supper in May netted $295.00 and another supper, held at Pine Knob Inn, in November netted $106.71 for the Circle, which was one-third of the receipts. The other two-thirds was given to other agencies of the church. Aside from the above amounts the Circle receipts have been $438.00, made up largely by dues paid by members who attend weekly meetings, contributions to the luncheon offerings and by the sale of fancy work articles sold during the winter months, mostly to members of the Circle.

On the other side of the picture is the good work done for the church and for others. The Circle paid $200.00 into the church treasury for current expenses. They maintain a membership in the Golden Cross Society, which is an auxiliary of the Cornwall Home for the Aged, where three former ministers of the Canadensis Methodist Church and their wives are residing. The Circle adopted two Korean orphans at a cost of $120 per year for each one. This is the second year. Boxes of gifts and warm clothing have been sent to these children.

They hold a membership in the auxiliary of the Home for the Aged in Philadelphia at $10.00 per year.

The Circle paid for ten Thanksgiving dinners at the Fifth St. Mission, Philadelphia, donated sandwiches and coffee to the Barrett Volunteer firemen during the fire at the Hillside Lodge, bought a steel cabinet to store sewing machines and other articles.

They sent $10 to the Deaconess Home in Philadelphia and are devoting one Thursday a month to making articles for their use. This is a special project for this year. $103 was sent to the WSCS treasurer for the missionary budjet and $25 additional was sent from their panny bank. $500 was paid to the building fund to help erase that debt.

Materials were bought by the Circle for the altar drapes for the sanctuary and curtains for the junior Sunday School room. They purchased an additional sewing machine and devoted one entire meeting and part of two other to sewing for the Cancer society.

All this work has been accomplished by the combined efforts of all the members and special thanks was given to the heads of different committees who plan and oversee the work: Ethel Stern, who has charge of the fancy work and who was president for 1957; Marie Price, now president; Lilile Shoesmith, chairman of the kitchen committee, who makes the weekly luncheon table attractive and who also sends out cards to the sick. Helen Sedar is the devotional chairman and has charge of the mission study programs. Marian Winters and Hallie Boston are in charge of novelties. Margaret McCard is collecting white elephants for a table at the bazaars. Mildred Englehart, Betty Shore and Lillian Bittner have charge of the work for the Deaconess Home. Harriet Gravel heads the apron committee and Sophie Vernoy is inventory chairman. Lelia Daniels and Marian Winters are the publicity committee. Edith Sieg is the supper chairman. Becky Seese although unable to attend the meetings is doing a lot of work at home for the Circle.

The entertainment was in the form of several television shows with members of the audience participating. The call letters were WSCS with Mae Price and Helen Sedar acting as masters of ceremonies. Many gifts were given as prizes.

The Wyckoff Shopper
The Friendly store in Wyckoff

'ROUND AND ABOUT WYCKOFF'S: Florence Predmore of our stationery department, pauses in her task of arranging Easter cards, to ask me what I meant in my column when I spoke of the "lovely days" just a minute before Springtime. "When I read it," she said, "I laughed and laughed—like Little Audrey." She had reason. When that column was written several days before, it WAS a lovely day—balmy, sunshiny, and laden with the germs of Spring Fever. The day it appeared was rainy, slushy and miserable. In advertising, you can't win. Just observe! The very day we advertise umbrellas or boots, the skies are as bright as though they'd never encountered a cloudburst. The day we talk about light-weight blankets for Spring, it's so hot the customers can't imagine ever needing a blanket again. The morning Spring coats are advertised is sure to be so cold you'll rummage in the attic for your college-day raccoon. Come to think ot it, our advertising department might be able to make a few extra dollars by offering a special service of weather arrangement. Anyone want a fair day for a picnic on July 8th? Just call us . . . we'll plan to advertise raincoats, hip boots, and all other merchandise that goes wih slipping and sloshing.

It was pleasant to see Mrs. Lillie Jago of Pen Argyl at Thursday evening's Fashion Show fitting. Mrs. Jago was president of the Woman's Club several years ago when we presented a fashion show there, and will model at tonight's show. The Pen Argyl club rooms over the bank are a delightful setting for a show—and the Pen Argyl women are attractive, friendly models, pleasant to work with and enthusiastic in their cooperation . . . One of the loveliest coats on our racks this Spring is a semi-chemise by Lassie Jr. When one sees how very attractive the chemise lines are on many women, it changes one's entire outlook on this year's styles. As for the colors—well, I never did have any quarrel with them. They are glorious. Bill Wells, our fashion merchandise manager, refers to them as "citrus tones"—lime, orange, et cetera. Whatever you call them, they're as refreshing as mint in a tall glass of iced tea on an August day . . . Two pleasant-faced visitors to our store the other morning were Karen Roth, who always has Spring in her step, regardless of the weather, and Mrs. Henry Hefele, who tells me she has several pictures she thinks I might enjoy having. I've known Mrs. Hefele for years—ever since my early days on the Record, and can't think of a more gracious person anywhere . . . I wonder if I've mentioned that Dottie Dunn, our Wyckoff switchboard operator, has written the lyrics and music of a hymn. Lovely too, Dottie, who always opens the doors of our store graciously to our telephone customers, has more church activities than anyone I know, and there's nothing she can't do. She directs the choir, plays piano and organ, sketches and paints, and solves the decorating problems of all her friends with need for an unusual idea. Just one of many nice people at Wyckoff's . . . Kathleen Widmer of our shoe department shows me the new Snuggle Bunnies by Sandler, and are they cute! Perfectly flat and pointed, they are of butter-soft leather, shirred at the back to assure perfect fit. The only decoration is a frisky bow of the same leather. Were styles ever that pretty when I was a teen ager? I can't recall.

YOU'LL SAY SO, TOO!

Once you've tried this wonderful dry cleaning service, you're sure to say, as I do, that it's the best ever. You'll like the gentle, thorough cleaning . . . the prompt service, too.

OFF THE RECORD

By Bob Clark
Sports Editor

PICKING 10 players who stood out in our mind as the best schoolboys to perform on local courts this year is a problem. But we were asked to do it, and naturally accept the challenge.

Our list would include Ted Williams of Stroudsburg; Dale Metzgar and Jim Kindrew, East Stroudsburg; Hal Rice, Wilson Borough; Frankie Butz, Bangor; Kerry Levandowski, Emmaus; Jack Superka, Coplay; Connie Shimer, Nazareth; Al Brosky, Catasauqua; and Ron Miller, Lehighton.

Williams, Kindrew, Levandowski, Superka are bigger boys, while Shimer, Miller and Butz are just off the "big man" class. Metzgar, Rice and Brosky are the playmakers of their respective teams.

If we had to pick one player we'd have to bow and select two—Williams and Rice. Ted is the Lehigh Valley's leading scorer—league or otherwise—and has an assortment of shots that makes him the biggest threat on a schoolboy court this season.

Rice, one of the most able ball-handlers around, has perfect hands that perform magic in setting up plays and tossing in doubledeckers. He averaged close to 20 markers an outing and was responsible, via assists, for a good share of the Warriors points in every game.

No matter how you rate the above—one ahead of the other—it would be a coach's dream to handle the ten.

On the college front, naming seven would be a task. But here goes anyway.

Charley German, East Stroudsburg Teachers; Ed Kazakavich, Scranton University; Jim Bishop and Syl Williams, Millersville STC; John Carr, and Terry German, West Chester STC; and Bob Bishop, Kutztown.

In naming a most valuable player, again two would get our vote. German made East Stroudsburg a threat in every game, while Kazakavich carried the Royals to their best year in more than a decade.

The above collegians are a wide assortment of players. Each has his own way of scoring and, as such, would make a unit practically unbeatable.

The Strouds will make formal application to enter the Blue Mountain Baseball League. The local baseballers, a cross-section of some of the best baseball material in the country, are making plans to attend the reorganizational BML meeting March 10 at Nazareth.

Last year the Strouds performed in the Pocono Mountain League until the club withdrew at the tail end of the season.

If the Strouds are accepted, such following teams will be foes of the locals during the coming season—Martin's Creek, Danielsville, Bath, Tatamy, Nazareth, Raubsville and Bethlehem and possibly Allentown.

The circuit is considered the top amateur ball loop in the area stretching from Allentown to Stroudsburg.

QUICK PICKUPS—Ray Davies has entered his Tobyhanna Depot five in the All-Army Basketball Tournament. The area's Signalmen will open play Wednesday.

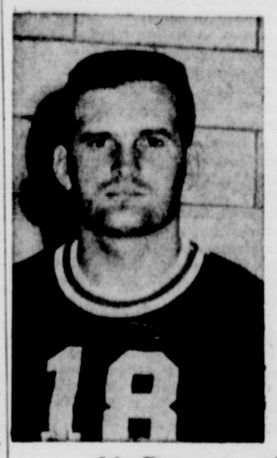
Oscar Stuckey took over first place in the average race in the Industrial Bowling League this week. Stuckey, first half king, ousted Stan Konawalik from the top with a 185 norm. Konawalik is second with 182, followed by Jim Harmon Sr. with 179.

High matches in the loop were produced by Stuckey, 580; Ken Barnes, 551; Russ Dennis, 562; and Harmon Sr., 537.

Luce's Proteges Host Wilkes Today In 'Hill' Gymnasium

EAST Stroudsburg Teachers tuned up for its revenge duel with Wilkes College today by turning back Trenton STC, 87-79, in the Warriors gymnasium Saturday night.

Dick Luce's proteges, who meet Wilkes in an 8:30 p.m. contest on the "Hill" hardwoods, struck early and then staved off a late Garden Stater rush to notch their ninth victory of the campaign.



John Krysa
Aids With 13

Charley German spearheaded the Warrior's offense against Trenton, shoving in 27 points. Two other STC courtment also hit the double figures when Charley Stouffer canned 16, and John Krysa netted 13.

With the regulars used mainly in the first half, East Stroudsburg built up a 25-point lead and took an actual 16-marker spread, 42-26, into the halftime intermission.

Reserves In

Luce, getting a good chance to look over his bench strength, moved in and out reserves the final 20 minutes. This was where Trenton showed its best offense, cutting deep into the "Hill" spread.

With five minutes remaining, ESSTC's first five came back in to insure the "Hill" representatives of a 9-7 log for the season.

19 In 1st Half

German tallied 19 of his output in the opening half to lead the Hill STC barrage, while Krysa, tallied 11 of his 13 in the final half.

High for Trenton was Roger Allgor with 17. Nick Panfen and Bill Wagner also aided with 12 each.

The loss was Trenton's 13th in 21 games.

East Stroudsburg's junior varsity went down to its first setback in the preliminary, bowing to Trenton's underlings, 71-57.

Seek Revenge

Gold Medal Play Put Off Until Mar. 10

RAY DAVIES, commissioner of basketball at the Stroudsburg YMCA, announced last night that play in the Gold Medal Junior and Senior Basketball Tournament has been postponed until next week.

Davies said the reason for the postponement was to allow more teams to enter Junior and Senior play.

At least eight teams in each category is the aim of Davies and his tournament aides.

Nine Entries

Thus far only five teams have entered senior competition and only four in the junior division.

In the senior (out of high school) the applications have been filed by Jack's Market, Ritter's Sporting Goods, Twin City TV, Gray's Chevrolet, and Tobyhanna Signal Depot. In the junior tournament (high school) entries have come from Ike's Variety Shop, American House, Radio Station WVPO, and Steve's Coffee Shop.

Deadline for filing is Saturday, March 8, Davies said.

Favorites Gain In Ice Runoffs

OSLO, Norway, March 2 (AP)—Favored Canada and Russia continued to pour in the goals today as they easily wrapped up their second straight victories in the world ice hockey championships. Canada blanked Norway 12-0 and Russia shutout Finland 10-0.

The United States and Czechslovakia, other members of the "big five" bracket, won their opening games Friday. They play again tomorrow with the Americans taking on Norway and the Czechs meeting Poland.

Impressive Schoolboy Card Features Bids For Runoffs

HARRISBURG, March 2 (AP)—An impressive slate of 1957 district champions features the outlook for this season's playoffs, which swing into high gear this week.

Not the least of the defending district titlists is potent Sharon, which won the state championship last year. There is an outside chance Sharon will meet its contender for the state crown last season again this year, since powerful Chester appears to dominate Dist. 1 again and is a likely prospect to take the regional diadem.

Here's the outlook for the week by regions:

In the West:

Dist. 7—Sharon got a big assist in its quest for another crack at the state title from Uniontown, which trimmed strong Ford City out of the race. The Uniontown win marks them as a prime contender.

Sharon goes into quarter final action Thursday against McKees Rocks.

In the East:

Dist. 1 — Quarter final games will be played throughout the district Friday. Chester's Clippers appear to have an easy lead-off in the playoffs against Interboro. In fact the district opposition this year does not seem as potent as in other campaigns to stop the Clippers.

Dist. 2 — Appearances indicate Plymouth of Wyoming Valley League, and Swoyersville, of the North League, are the principal contenders to vie for the district flag.

Dist. 3—Dominating the field of three teams in the playoffs for the district crown is powerful York, of the Central Penn loop, one of the only undefeated teams in the state. Still to be decided in playoffs this week is the championship of the South Penn League, now a contest between Carlisle, Hanover and Waynesboro.

Dist. 4—Coal Twp. gained new lustre as a possible repeater on its 1957 district crown by knocking off Williamsport to close out both teams' regular campaign. Williamsport — an independent — probably will meet Coal Twp. again in district playoffs.

The team now favored to win the district crown, however, is Sunbury, which sports an unblemished log for the season.

Dist. 11—Champions still must be decided in all of the five major loops in the district, putting off playoffs for the district crown until next week.

Though Allentown was the 1957 district winner, it still has a tough road to go in taking its home East Penn circuit title again. The other contenders are Bethlehem, first half winner, and Easton, tied up with the Canaries for the second half flag.

Crowe's Cops Three Points

CROWE'S Insurance Agency, continuing their bid for one of the top three places, captured three points from Von Bulow's of Easton in a Delaware Valley Bowling League match Saturday.

Jack Darr, with 593, and Russ Bergman, with 562, led Crowe's. Ray Uhler was high for Von Bulow's with 570.

Tubeless Tire Is Featured By Goodrich

NEWEST member to join the ranks of Monday Business Page advertisers in The Daily Record is B. F. Goodrich Co. of 735 Main St., Stroudsburg.

The firm has been established in the Stroudsburgs for many years and the store is managed by Les Traub. A variety of merchandise is carried varying from toys, bikes and the like, for youngsters and also includes fine appliances for the home.

Motorola TV, Radio and Hi Fi sets are stocked in many different models. Kelvinator Refrigerators, Freezers, Washers and Dryers round out the line along with various allied products for the home.

Of course, most everyone is acquainted with the fact that B. F. Goodrich Co. has been a pioneer in the tire field since its inception in this country. One of the latest developments in this line is the B. F. Goodrich Tubeless Tire. This tire tested and proved by the American Automobile Assn. shows that blowouts when they occur on this tire are changed to "slow-outs".

This is due to its layer of sealant rubber used inside the tire.

Since 1947, hundreds upon thousands of users have used Tubless Tires made by Goodrich and have covered billions of miles. Their experience shows the dependability built into each B. F. Goodrich Tubeless Tire.

Why not stop in and let Les Traub or Ed Van Why tell you how little it costs to have these fine Tubeless Tires on your car. After all, you owe it to your family and yourself to ride on the best!

Price Handles Wide Variety Of Models

MANY a snow-bound resident of the Pocono Mountains and many other parts of the country are by now very well aware of the type of job that Ford Tractors can do with the heavy snowfall we had.

For a long time now, front end loaders such as were used to clear snow have been used for grading, leveling and pushing dirt and other materials around for construction purposes.

Behind these versatile construction implements, in most every case, was a rugged Ford Tractor such as is sold and serviced by Raymond Price, Inc., of Cresco.

These mighty workhorses are available in a variety of sizes and engine displacements specially matched to your requirements. A choice of either gasoline or deisel engine broadens the field even more.

Power Steering

Power steering and live PTO built-in Hydraulic system are standard on many models and available on all.

Whether you're a farmer, contractor or landscaper, you'll find the Ford Powermaster Tractors offer the most versatility to be found in any comparable unit made today. Implements include front-end loader, back hoe shovel post hole digger, rear blade, plows, disc harrows and many other units.

If you have a tractor and wish to trade it in, you'll find Raymond Price Inc., of Cresco, ready to give you top dollar for your present unit. If you're buying new, you'll find dollar for dollar, you can't beat Ford!

Archibald Displaying New Heater

IF YOU'RE a motel or cabin owner, or if you're planning to put heat in your units, this is for you.

The H. C. Archibald Co., 406 Main St., has just received a revolutionary type of gas heating unit from the Stewart-Warner Co. Known as the Saf-Aire wall heater, it is safety-sealed, needs no chimney, ducts or electricity and can be used in one room or the entire home.

Burns Any Fuel

Saf-Aire burns any type of gas heating fuel in a sealed chamber. Sealed vents through the wall supply outside air for combustion and discharge products directly outdoors. Fire and its end products are separated completely from the room air you breathe.

Since there is no open flame and all controls are sealed, there is no danger of burning out the oxygen in the room and the danger of gas fumes is eliminated.

And since no electricity is needed, you have no worry about lack or absence of heat due to power failures.

This new Saf-Aire wall heater has already proven itself efficient and economical in test areas throughout the county.

Stop in at the H. C. Archibald showroom and see it demonstrated.

Modern Home Improvement Recommends Seasonmaster

IT'S TOO late to worry about storm windows this year, say many people.

"This is not at all true", says Michael De Maria of Modern Home Improvement, 336½ Main St., Stroudsburg.

"Any time of the year that you have them installed, you will find use for either the storm window or the easy-slide screen unit of our famous Seasonmaster or Streamliner units.

The savings in fuel alone pays for the additional expenditure. Whether you choose Streamliner or Seasonmaster Aluminum Combinations you will find them both covered by a full written guarantee assuring you of lasting satisfaction always.

Owned By DeMaria

Established in 1951, Modern Home Improvement specializes in roofing, siding and alteration jobs of all sizes and types. Also, kitchen remodeling and other interior jobs are handled with equal ease.

DeMaria, owner-operator of Modern Home Improvement, is by no means a newcomer to the field, having previously been in the work for many years, even prior to opening his own business. He has, through fair dealing and good workmanship, made a name for himself in the community.

Next time you have a job calling for alterations or new construction, call Mike at Stroudsburg 1247. That's Modern Home Improvement, 336½ Main St. in Stroudsburg.

Right Type Of Pump For Every Job

THERE are Pumps and Pumps and D. Katz & Sons, Dreher Ave., Stroudsburg is one place you can depend on for the right type of pump for every job around the home.

Too much water?

With the thawing conditions throughout our area and the excess water conditions in basements and the like, sump pumps are very much in demand. The time to prepare for these conditions is before the conditions exist.

Many people today have a permanent sump built into their basement at that low point providing for a dry condition at all times. A pump installed in this way is always ready when the first little trickle of water starts and it turns on automatically.

Not enough water?

Advice Offered

Here too, you'll find D. Katz and Sons ready with the finest line of pumps to be found anywhere. Oftentimes, we are misinformed about what type and capacity a pump will handle our water pumping job.

Ed Katz or Bob Collins of the Plumbing and Heating Division will be happy to inform you of the proper Jacuzzi Pump for your application. Outstanding in the line is the Jacuzzi Deeprime Jet Pump capable of handling wells up to 400 feet.

Whether it's a matter of too much water or not enough, you'll find the answers at D. Katz and Sons. Just pick up your phone and Call 2369!

The Real and Only Sanctuary

Today men everywhere are being forced to see that peace must be found within themselves, in a true understanding of God, before it can appear for the outside world.

This understanding is the "secret place" referred to in the ninety-first Psalm, where "there shall no evil befall thee."

Through thoughtful study of

SCIENCE AND HEALTH
with Key to the Scriptures
by Mary Baker Eddy

you can find this secret place of peace within, and learn how to abide there.

You may read, borrow or purchase Science and Health at any Christian Science Reading Room, or send $3 and a copy will be mailed postpaid.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
